Epstein found dead in jail cell in apparent suicide, was not on watch

Procedure requiring inmate checks every 30 minutes was not followed, a source said.

Disgraced financier Jeffrey Epstein was found dead on Saturday after an apparent suicide in the New York jail cell where he was being held without bail on sex-trafficking charges, and a source said he was not on suicide watch at the time of his death.

Epstein, 66, was found unresponsive in his cell in the Special Housing Unit of the Metropolitan Correctional Center (MCC) and taken to a hospital where he was pronounced dead, the Federal Bureau of Prisons, which operates the Lower Manhattan jail, said in a statement. It declined to comment further.

Epstein, a well-connected money manager dogged for years by allegations that he sexually abused girls and young women, was found hanging by his neck, according to the source, who was not authorized to speak on the record.

The financier, who once counted Republican President Donald Trump and Democratic former President Bill Clinton as friends, was arrested on July 6 and pleaded not guilty to charges of sex trafficking involving dozens of underage girls as young as 14, from at least 2002 to 2005.

The FBI and the Department of Justice's Inspector

General were opening investigations into his death, U.S. Attorney General William Barr said, adding that he was "appalled" to learn of the apparent suicide in federal custody.

Last month, Epstein was found unconscious on the floor of his jail cell with marks on his neck, and officials were investigating that incident as a possible suicide or assault.

"Mr. Epstein's death raises serious questions that must be answered," Barr said in a statement.

Even though Epstein was found unconscious last month, he had recently been taken off suicide watch, a special set of procedures for inmates in danger of taking their own life, according to the source. The financier was in a cell by himself when his body was found.

It was not immediately clear why Epstein was taken off suicide watch.

At the MCC, two jail guards are required to make separate checks on all prisoners every 30 minutes, but that procedure was not followed overnight, according to the source. In addition, every 15 minutes guards are required to make another check on prisoners who are on suicide watch.

Guards generally remove any prisoner placed on suicide watch from the Special Housing Unit where Epstein was housed, according to a Twitter post by Preet Bharara, a former Manhattan-based U.S. Attorney. The unit separates inmates such as accused sex offenders from the general population for their protection.

Aja Davis, a spokeswoman for the New York City Office of the Chief Medical Examiner, said she could not say how Epstein died before her office examined the body.

INVESTIGATION TO CONTINUE

Epstein was arrested on July 6 at a New Jersey airport after taking a private plane from Paris. Last month, a judge refused Epstein's request to release him on bail and allow him to live under 24-hour guard in his opulent townhouse on Manhattan's Upper East Side. The financier was appealing that ruling.

Prosecutors said a search of his townhouse, conducted under a warrant, uncovered evidence of perhaps thousands of nude photographs of "what appeared to be underage girls," including some photos cataloged on compact discs and kept in a locked safe.

In a court filing on July 25, the government said it was pursuing an "ongoing investigation of uncharged individuals" in connection with the case.

That investigation, by the U.S. Attorney's Office in Manhattan, will continue despite Epstein's death, a different source familiar with the matter said.

"Today's events are disturbing, and we are deeply aware of their potential to present yet another hurdle to giving Epstein's many victims their day in court," Geoffrey Berman, the U.S. Attorney in Manhattan, said in a statement. "Our investigation of the conduct charged in the indictment — which included a conspiracy count — remains ongoing." REUTERS

Tearful Serena retires injured in Toronto final

2 Serena Williams' first U.S. Open tune-up ended in dramatic fashion as the tearful American was forced to retire with a back injury while trailing Canadian teenager Bianca Andreescu 3-1 in the Rogers Cup final on Sunday. Williams, who hopes to chase a record-equaling 24th career Grand Slam title at the U.S. Open, seemed fine on court but suddenly sat crying in her chair before deciding to retire 19 minutes into the match with back spasms. "I'm sorry I couldn't do it today. I tried but I just couldn't do it," an emotional Williams, who struggled to get the words out, told the crowd. The 37-year-old Williams, whose competitive action this year has been severely limited because of knee issues, declared herself pain-free ahead of the tournament. She now faces her latest injury setback with the year's final Grand Slam just two weeks away.

Goldman: US-China trade war recession fears stoked

3 Goldman Sachs Group Inc. said on Sunday that fears of the U.S.-China trade war leading to a recession are increasing and that Goldman no longer expects a trade deal between the world's two largest economies before the 2020 U.S. presidential election. "We expect tariffs targeting the remaining $300 billion of U.S. imports from China to go into effect," the bank said in a note sent to clients. President Trump announced on Aug. 1 that he would impose a 10 percent tariff on a final $300 billion worth of Chinese imports on Sept. 1, prompting China to halt purchases of U.S. agricultural products. The U.S. also declared China a "currency manipulator." China denies that it has manipulated the yuan for competitive gain. "Overall, we have increased our estimate of the growth impact of the trade war," the bank said in the note, authored by three of its economists. REUTERS.

AUTO ACCIDENTS • SEPTA ACCIDENTS • LIQUOR LIABILITY • MEDICAL MALPRACTICE

Did You Know?

Dram Shop laws hold servers of alcoholic beverages legally responsible for harm that visibly intoxicated patrons cause to others. State liquor liability laws can apply not only to bars, liquor stores and restaurants, but also to social clubs and private events where liquor is served. The laws also include selling liquor without a license, selling liquor after hours and selling liquor to minors.

If a person is served alcoholic beverages while visibly intoxicated, and then gets into an accident injuring someone while driving drunk, the owner of the serving establishment can be held responsible in addition to the drunk driver.

Dram Shop lawsuits aren't limited to auto accidents — if a bar serves a visibly intoxicated person who then starts a fistfight and seriously injures another patron, that patron could sue the bar under the dram shop law.

In order to successfully sue under the dram shop law, you must be able to prove:

1. An employee of an establishment served alcohol to someone at a time that that person was visibly intoxicated and,
2. The business or host's decision to serve alcohol to the visibly intoxicated person directly led to the injuries.

If you feel that you or a loved one have been injured as a result of a Dram Shop violation, call us at (215) 569-1212 to explore whether you may have the right to recover full compensation for your injuries.

The Child Victims Act, which takes effect Aug. 14 in New York, may unleash an "avalanche" of civil suits.

Lawyers for several women who say they were sexually abused by disgraced financier Jeffrey Epstein plan to file lawsuits this week against his estate following his apparent suicide in a New York jail cell.

Los Angeles attorney Lisa Bloom, who represents two women, told Reuters "we intend to promptly file those civil claims" having held off suing while federal prosecutors pursued sex-trafficking charges against Epstein.

New York lawyer Roberta Kaplan said she hopes to file on Wednesday on behalf of a client to take advantage of a new New York state law which makes it possible to pursue decades-old claims of abuse.

The "Child Victims Act," which takes effect on Aug. 14, gives people a year to sue over allegations of sexual abuse, regardless of when the alleged acts occurred.

Kaplan will sue on behalf of a woman described in the indictment against Epstein as a minor victim. The unidentified woman was recruited to engage in sex acts with Epstein around 2002 and paid hundreds of dollars for each encounter with the financier, according to the indictment.

She was 14 when it happened, Kaplan said.

The financier, who once counted Republican President Trump and Democratic former President Bill Clinton as friends, was arrested on July 6 and pleaded not guilty to charges of sex trafficking involving dozens of underage girls as young as 14, from at least 2002 to 2005.

More than a decade ago, Epstein pleaded guilty in Florida to state charges of solicitation of prostitution from a minor in a deal with prosecutors that has been widely criticized as too lenient.

Epstein's death is likely to "unleash an avalanche of civil suits against his estate," said New York attorney Paul Callan, who is not involved with the case.

Epstein, 66, was found unresponsive Saturday morning in his cell at the Metropolitan Correctional Center in Manhattan, according to the Federal Bureau of Prisons, which operates the jail.

A document filed by his lawyers last month listed his total assets at about $559 million, including two private islands and four homes. One residence, on the Upper East Side of Manhattan, is worth an estimated $77 million.

It was not immediately known if Epstein had a will. Several of his criminal lawyers did not respond to requests for comment.

Bloom said she hopes estate monies will not be distributed until the claims are litigated.

"If we find out the estate is selling off things, dissipating assets, we will go in for a court order," Bloom said.

It is unclear whether the estate will try to shield Epstein's assets from the women, Kaplan said. She said lawyers will need to dig into his finances.

Epstein's death is a small roadblock for the civil cases, but not an insurmountable one, legal experts said.

"If he'd been convicted of a crime, you don't have to prove much in a civil case," Kaplan said. REUTERS

2020 Dem contenders slam Trump for Epstein conspiracy theories

The president retweeted a comedian's claim that the Clintons were involved in the apparent suicide.

Democratic presidential contenders Beto O'Rourke and Sen. Cory Booker slammed U.S. President Donald Trump on Sunday for promoting unfounded conspiracy theories about the apparent suicide of disgraced financier Jeffrey Epstein in his New York jail cell.

After the death on Saturday of Epstein, a millionaire charged with sex trafficking who once counted Trump and former President Bill Clinton as friends, Trump retweeted a baseless claim from a conservative comedian that the Clintons were involved in the death.

"This is another example of our president using this position of public trust to attack his political enemies with unfounded conspiracy theories," O'Rourke, a former congressman from Texas, said on CNN's "State of the Union."

O'Rourke said Trump was trying to shift the public's focus away from last weekend's two mass shootings in El Paso and Dayton.

"He's changing the conversation. If we allow him to do that we will never be able to focus on the true problems."

Booker, a U.S. senator from New Jersey, said Trump's retweet was "just more recklessness."

"He is giving life to not just conspiracy theories but really whipping people up into anger and worse against different people in this country," he said on CNN.

The FBI and the Department of Justice's Inspector General have opened investigations into the death of Epstein, who a source said had been taken off suicide watch. Last month, Epstein was found unconscious on the floor of his jail cell with marks on his neck, and officials were investigating that incident as a possible suicide or assault.

U.S. Attorney General William Barr said he was "appalled" to learn of the apparent suicide in federal custody. "Mr. Epstein's death raises serious questions that must be answered," Barr said in a statement on Saturday.

Rep. Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez, a Democratic congresswoman from New York City and a leading progressive voice, tweeted: "We need answers. Lots of them."

White House senior adviser Kellyanne Conway said investigation of Epstein should continue despite his death.

"Jeffrey Epstein has done some very bad things over a number of years, so let's continue to investigate that," she said on "Fox News Sunday."

"I don't think that somebody's crimes and the accountability for that necessarily perish with them."

More than a decade ago, Epstein pleaded guilty in Florida to state charges of solicitation of prostitution from a minor in a deal with prosecutors that has been widely criticized as too lenient.

Then in July, Epstein was indicted, federal prosecutors in New York accusing him of knowingly recruiting underage women to engage in sex acts with him, sometimes over a period of years while paying the women for each encounter. He pleaded not guilty.

Why Haven't Senior Homeowners Been Told These Facts?

Keep reading if you own a home in the U.S. and were born before 1957.

It's a well-known fact that for many senior citizens in the U.S. their home is their single biggest asset, often accounting for more than 50% of their total net worth.

Yet, according to new statistics from the mortgage industry, senior homeowners in the U.S. are now sitting on more than 6.9 trillion dollars* of unused home equity.

With people now living longer than ever before and home prices back up again, ignoring this "hidden wealth" may prove to be short sighted.

All things considered, it's not surprising that more than a million homeowners have already used a government-insured Home Equity Conversion Mortgage or "HECM" loan to turn their home equity into extra cash for retirement.

However, today, there are still millions of eligible

Although today's HECM loans have been improved to provide even greater financial protection for homeowners, there are still many misconceptions. For example, a lot of for everyone, they can be a real lifesaver for senior homeowners.

The cash from a HECM loan can be used for any purpose. Many people use the money to save on interest charges by paying off credit cards or other high-interest loans. Other common uses include making home improvements, paying off medical bills or helping other family members. Some people simply need the extra cash for everyday expenses while others are now using it as a "safety net" for financial emergencies.

homeowners who could benefit from this FHA-insured loan but may simply not be aware of this "retirement secret."

Some homeowners think HECM loans sound "too good to be true." After all, you get the cash you need out of your home but you have no more monthly mortgage payments.

It's a fact: no monthly mortgage payments are required with a government-insured HECM loan; however the homeowners are still responsible for paying for the maintenance of their home, property taxes, homeowner's insurance and, if required, their HOA fees.

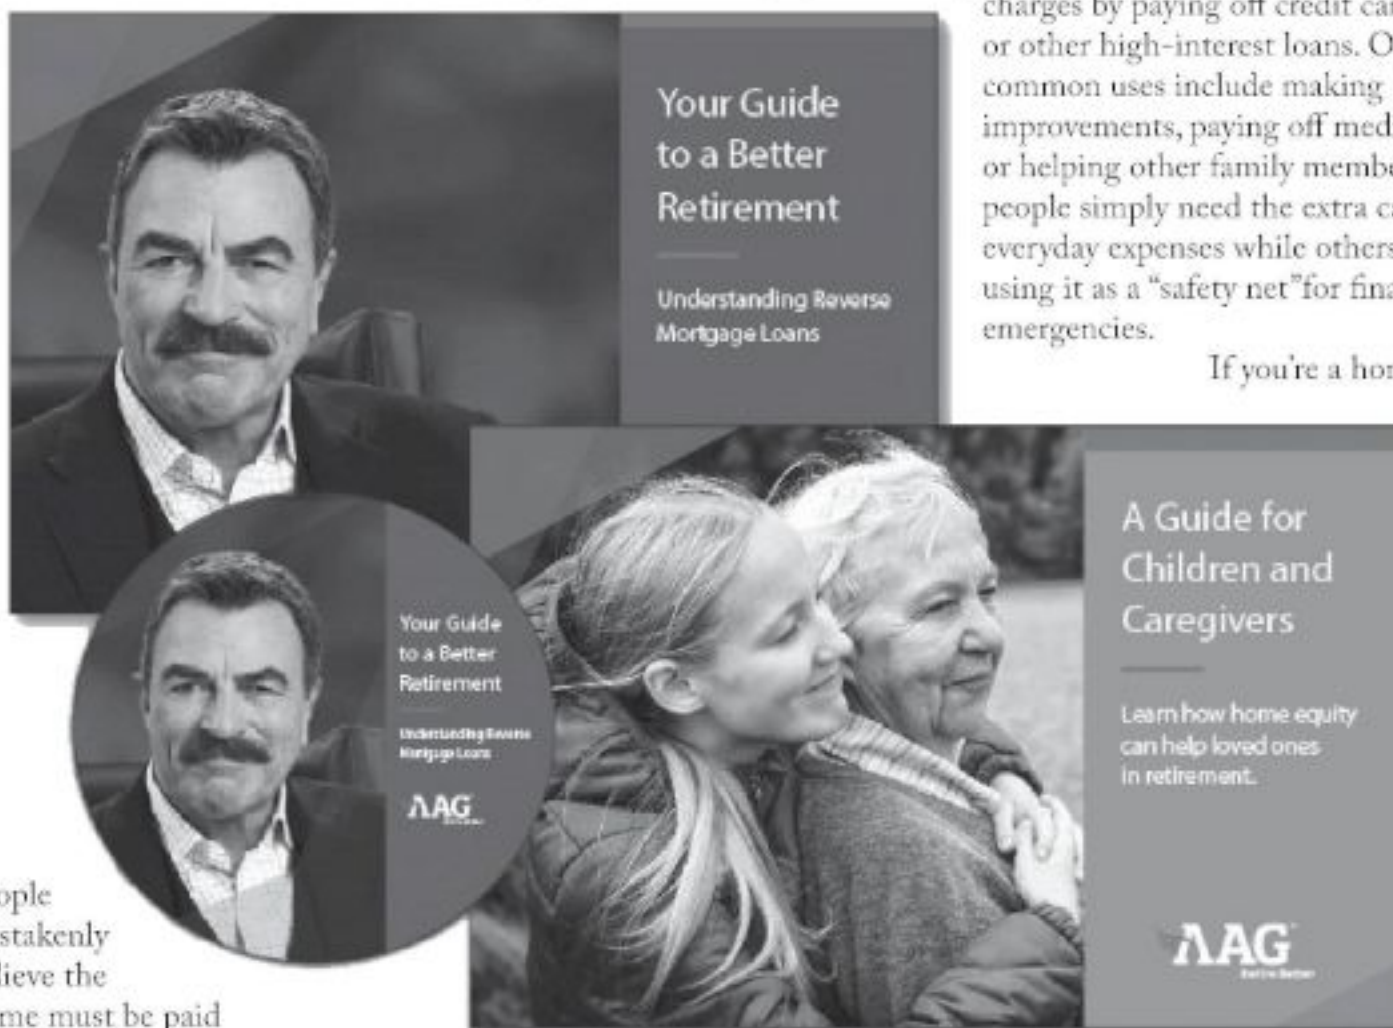

Another fact many are not aware of is that HECM reverse mortgages first took hold when President Reagan signed the FHA Reverse Mortgage Bill into law 31 years ago in order to help senior citizens remain in their homes.

Today, HECM loans are simply an effective way for homeowners 62 and older to get the extra cash they need to enjoy retirement.

people mistakenly believe the home must be paid off in full in order to qualify for a HECM loan, which is not the case. In fact, one key advantage of a HECM is that the proceeds will first be used to pay off any existing liens on the property, which frees up cash flow, a huge blessing for seniors living on a fixed income. Unfortunately, many senior homeowners who might be better off with HECM loan don't even bother to get more information because of rumors they've heard.

That's a shame because HECM loans are helping many senior homeowners live a better life.

In fact, a recent survey by American Advisors Group (AAG), the nation's number one HECM lender, found that over 97% of their clients are satisfied with their loans. While these special loans are not

A reverse mortgage increases the principal mortgage loan amount and decreases home equity (it is a negative amortization loan). AAG works with other lenders and financial institutions that offer reverse mortgages. To process your request for a reverse mortgage, AAG may forward your contact information to such lenders for your consideration of reverse mortgage programs that they offer.

Reverse mortgage loan terms include occupying the home as your primary residence, maintaining the home, paying property taxes and homeowners insurance. Although these costs may be substantial, AAG does not establish an escrow account for these payments. However, a set-aside account can be set up for taxes and insurance, and in some cases may be required. Not all interest on a reverse mortgage is tax-deductible and to the extent that it is, such deduction is not available until the loan is partially or fully repaid.

AAG charges an origination fee, mortgage insurance premium (where required by HUD), closing costs and servicing fees, rolled into the balance of the loan. AAG charges interest on the balance, which grows over time. When the last borrower or eligible non-borrowing spouse dies, sells the home, permanently moves out, or fails to comply with the loan terms, the loan becomes due and payable (and the property may become subject to foreclosure). When this happens, some or all of the equity in the property no longer belongs to the borrowers, who may need to sell the home or otherwise repay the loan balance. V2019.04.17

the United States Olympic Paralympic Committee (USOPC).

"Every athlete competing at the 2019 Pan American Games commits to terms of eligibility, including to refrain from demonstrations that are political in nature," said USOPC spokesman Mark Jones in a statement on Saturday regarding Imboden's protest.

"In this case, Race didn't adhere to the commitment he made to the organizing committee and the USOPC. We respect his rights to express his viewpoints, but we are disappointed that he chose not to honor his commitment."

"Our leadership are reviewing what consequences may result."

The International Olympic Committee (IOC), which has similar rules regarding protests during the Games, will likely be watching how the USOPC

The Pan American Games medal podium is no place for politics, United States softball gold medalist Monica Abbott said on Sunday after two of her teammates used award ceremonies to stage protests.

Gold medal-winning fencer Race Imboden took a knee during his awards presentation on Friday to protest over social issues at home in the U.S., urging his fellow athletes on Twitter to "please use your platforms for empowerment and change."

Hammer thrower Gwen Berry did just that on Saturday, raising her fist as the U.S. national anthem played following her gold medal-winning effort.

The protests have split opinions.

Some have pointed to an athlete's right to free speech while others like Abbott, who has represented the U.S. at two Olympics, say they support that right but just not while representing your country at an international competition.

"One thing that makes the U.S. great is that we have this ability to have freedom in a lot of different things, it is a founding principle in our country — freedom of speech, freedom of religion," Abbott said during the Games closing news conference on Sunday.

"But as an athlete it is our opportunity to put differences aside, whether they're political, they're athletic; to whether it is the way we look to put those aside to celebrate something that can bring the world together."

"That is what sport is about. That is what I think the Olympic and Pan American vision is about, bringing people together."

Such protests are in violation of an agreement athletes sign before competing for the U.S. internationally, leaving both Imboden and Berry facing possible discipline from deals with the matter with the Tokyo Olympics now less than a year away.

Athletes taking a knee has become a way of protesting injustice in the United States.

The protest was first started in 2016 by former San Francisco 49ers quarterback Colin Kaepernick to draw attention to police shootings of unarmed black men.

Berry's raised fist recalled memories of what was perhaps the Olympics' most famous protest, when sprinters Tommie Smith and John Carlos raised their clenched fists into the air during the 200 meters medal ceremony at the 1968 Mexico Summer Games. REUTERS

WHO says no new Ebola cases in Congo hub; 1,300 vaccinated

ALL IMAGES REUTERS

The World Health Organization said it has vaccinated over 1,300 people who potentially came into contact with the Ebola virus in the Congolese city of Goma, helping contain what many feared would be a rapid spread in an urban center.

A yearlong Ebola outbreak in eastern Democratic Republic of Congo has killed at least 1,800, the second-biggest toll ever, and efforts to contain the virus have been hobbled by militia violence and some local resistance to outside interference.

Goma, a lakeside city of nearly 2 million people on the Rwandan border, has been on high alert over the past week after a gold miner with a large family contaminated several people before dying himself.

"Ongoing vaccination activities have reached the majority (98%) of eligible contacts, and 1,314 contacts, contacts of contacts and front-line workers [have been] vaccinated to date," the WHO said in a statement last week.

No new confirmed cases had been reported in Goma since the WHO's previous report on Aug. 2.

The use of an experimental Ebola vaccine, developed by Merck, has proven to be a key weapon against the hemorrhagic fever, although reaching contacts in rural areas beset by violence has proven difficult.

The vaccine's success has been most obvious in cities where contacts can be easier to trace, helping avoid the widespread havoc seen in densely populated areas during a 2013-2016 outbreak in West Africa that killed over 11,000 people. REUTERS

Biden's latest gaffe might be elocution.

letters@metro.us

Donald Trump is not the most unintelligible candidate in the 2020 presidential race.

That honor belongs to Joe Biden. This is what artificial intelligence has determined via Trint, an app that uses AI to automatically transcribe audio and video. The company fed a speech sample from the top 11 Democratic candidates — their closing statements from the first primary debate last June — along with a snippet from Trump.

The candidates with the highest percentage of transcription accuracy are theoretically the most understandable — at least to robots.

Despite their diametrically opposed accents, Sens. Amy Klobuchar (D-MN) and Bernie Sanders (D-VT, but still clinging to his Brooklyn honk) came in tops, with 100 percent accuracy. Sen. Cory Booker (D-NJ) and California businessman Andrew Yang were close behind with 99.5 percent and 99.24 percent, respectively. Sens. Elizabeth Warren and Kamala Harris, and Pete Buttigieg, Marianne Williamson and Julian Castro were all in the 98th percentile.

Coming in last: Trump, with 97.37 percent accuracy, crowdpleaser Beto O'Rourke (95.83 percent) and Biden, the famed "retail politician" with the common touch (95.33 percent).

"All of these people speak well," says Trint CEO Jeffrey Kofman. "It's just that certain speech behavior that will determine how AI can recognize what you're saying. If you swallow some words, AI is not going to put those words in. If what you've said is a little garbled, the outcome will reflect that."

Why might Bernie Sanders, who speaks with a thicker version of the old-school New Yorkese sometimes favored by Trump, beat the president to a perfect score? "He speaks really loudly, and he tends to enunciate quite well," says Kofman, who founded Trint after 30 years as a journalist with ABC, CBS and the CBC. "AI likes that. It's the people who eat their words, who tend to let them trail off, that tend to be more challenged."

What other lessons do the results hold for public speakers of any stripe? "It's kind of like a grade-school elocution class, what a teacher might have said a generation or two ago," says Kofman. "Speak slowly and enunciate. Come to a full stop. All those things were true in the '50s and '60s, and AI is kind of bringing them back."

The algorithm used to analyze the speech samples is known as WER, or word error rate; as anyone with a smartphone or Google Home knows, speech-recognition technology is moving fast. Trint will soon offer live transcription and instant multilingual translation, geared toward the instant dissemination of information the media ecosystem requires. Whether it helps with our political digestion remains to be seen. Theoretically, voters could use AI apps to create instant personal transcripts of debates or speeches for their review and reflection. "This is our brave new world of technology," says Kofman. "I think it is really an interesting exercise to kind of stand back and say, you know, technology has no political bias. In its purest form, what can it say about how people communicate?"

Billy Crudup on the emotional standoff of 'After the Wedding'

The remake of the Danish film, co-starring Julianne Moore and Michelle Williams, hits theaters this weekend.

PAT KING
patrick.king@metro.us

The streets of Midtown Manhattan are being treated to a vulgar display of rain outside the hotel where I meet actor Billy Crudup to talk about his new film, "After the Wedding." In a way, it's perfect weather to have as a backdrop to talk about such a heavy and emotional film that delivers high-water-mark performances not only from Crudup, but his co-stars Julianne Moore and Michelle Williams.

Adapted from the original Danish film by Bart Freundlich, "After the Wedding" centers around an American woman named Isabel, played by Michelle Williams, who is currently working in an orphanage in India. The organization is running low on funding and they must come up with ideas for how to find investors quickly. Out of the blue, she is contacted by a wealthy CEO named Theresa who is offering to give the orphanage a generous donation. To receive the money, Isabel must travel to New York to meet with Theresa. While hashing out the details, Theresa invites Isabel to stay the weekend and attend her daughter Abby's wedding. Once Isabel arrives, she immediately recognizes Theresa's husband (and Abby's father) as her ex, Oscar, played by Crudup. As information unfolds, Isabel learns that Abby is actually the child Oscar and she conceived years ago and had, supposedly, given up for adoption. From there, more secrets are revealed as to both the reasons why Oscar made his decision to keep Abby and Theresa's motivations behind helping Isabel.

At the moment when Isabel and Oscar finally reunite, you truly feel the pit in your stomach, secondhand, from the estranged couple. It is almost like an emotional standoff where the audience is to decide which character's motivations are the most justified given the circumstances of their situation. That kind of moral predicament is what drew Crudup to the film in the first place.

"When we were thinking about doing this movie, I was saying that I wanted to play Oscar when he has to manage that situation," says Crudup. "When he's seen Isabel leave, when they've made the pact to give their daughter up for adoption, and when he's pacing in his room, knowing that she's six blocks away and he can't help himself but walk to the adoption agency and that he can't help but go back. That he's riddled with guilt now that he has this unforeseen attachment to this young human being that he had no idea would erupt in him in a way that it had and now has no way of contacting Isabel. And that struggle is fascinating and one that creatively is new to me. I haven't seen that portrayed before. So to imagine Oscar having gone through that and then ultimately coming out of it thinking that he has done the absolute right thing, only to discover later on, after having 20 years of fortification in that belief, to see it completely shattered. That's a great dramatic arc and I think a confusing one, too, for audiences."

Audiences will surely choose who their villains and heroes are while watching this film. But, what the story does so wonderfully is pose the question: What would you do if the shoe was on the other foot?

"I feel that so often in life there are not simple answers to human behavior," explains Crudup. "I mean, particularly at a time when we're super-busy identifying our differences, the commonality we have far exceeds that. It's just much more confusing to tolerate all of it. We try to live in a to try to get along. And that's, to me, a generous way of approaching a civil-social-society. And so I think this film tries to address that emotionally."

One of the interesting aspects of this remake of the original Susanne Bier film is that Freundlich chose to swap the genders of all of the characters in order to both show Theresa and Isabel as strong, successful and emotionally complex women, but also to show a new definition of masculinity given that Oscar is mostly dependent on the life Theresa is able to provide for him and his daughter.

Crudup believes this reversal was an important narrative device in order to give Moore and Williams the opportunity to take on such powerful roles, but it also gave him the chance to sink his teeth into the vulnerability of his character.

"That's an atypical patriarch role, right?" Crudup says. "It does something great for male actors, as well, to be sure to give them the opportunity to find the features of masculinity that happened in that kind of power strip, a structural change. It's a phenomenal thing."

"I feel that so often in life there are not simple answers to human behavior."

civil society, but the actual interpersonal communication, expression of beliefs, and expression of values and feelings are dictated by social discourse. And in order to have a reasonable one, you have to have a humane approach to people, which is that we may not agree on things, but we all belong and we all have Restaurant Week: A Taste of Chestnut Hill is in full swing.

MOLLY GIVEN
Molly.Given@metro.us

Restaurant Week: A Taste of Chestnut Hill is here, and if you haven't made the scenic drive to this picturesque neighborhood in Philly yet, now is the time.

Those who live or work in Chestnut Hill know just how special the food scene is, and for those who still need to take a dive into the Chestnut culinary pool, there are plenty of options to choose from — and A Taste of Chestnut Hill is the perfect opportunity to do so.

During Restaurant Week, neighborhood eateries are offering prix-fixe and a la carte meals at an incredible price point. The enticing specials are running now until Aug. 16 and range from $15 to $45 per person.

A few participating eateries include the popular Baker Street Bread Company, offering an enticing selection of gourmet sandwiches and cookies; El Poquito, offering mouthwatering Mexican fare including tacos, quesadillas and churros; Jansen, serving up flavorful summer dishes such as chicken paillard and Norwegian salmon; and Thai Kuu, offering tasty Thai choices including crispy spring rolls and pad Thai.

Other delicious choices include Campbell's Place (think octopus, flatbreads and ribs), Chestnut Grill (linguini, bruschetta and calamari), Cosimo's Pizza Cafe (enticing full pies and slices), Iron Hill Brewery & Restaurant (grilled flank steak, trout and crème brûlée), McNally's Tavern (select sandwich choices), Mica (summer melon soup, dark chocolate tart and crispy salmon) and Tavern on the Hill (shrimp and corn chowder, fried chicken and pound cake).

One stand-out selection from the impressive repertoire of restaurants though is Paris Bistro & Jazz Cafe. The quaint and charming establishment is located right in the center of Chestnut Hill, but transports you far away to the streets of Paris with their comfortable outdoor seating and authentic decor.

For Restaurant Week, Paris will be offering three enticing courses for $37. Options include white grape gazpacho with leeks, almonds, cucumber and dill oil; summer salmon cassoulet with white beans, bacon, haricot vert and panko crusted salmon; and local apple tart with allspice chantilly cream and a caramel drizzle for a decadent dessert.

Heading to this popular eatery on the weekends is also very worth your while. According to the website, every Thursday through Sunday, Philadelphia's best jazz musicians will play the standards and selections from the Great American Songbook and music of the Jazz Era in their downstairs Jazz Cafe. Dinner is also available downstairs.

For more information on Restaurant Week: A Taste of Chestnut Hill, visit chestnuthillpa.com. Street parking is free during the week after 6 p.m.

CBD Dinner with Jose Garces

Chef Jose Garces is collaborating with Chef John Mooney (of NYC's Bell, Book & Candle and DC's Bidwell) for a delicious multicourse dinner highlighting cooking with CBD. Garces and Mooney will heat up the kitchen with delicious CBD-infused dishes while bar owner and mixologist, Le, of Hop Sing Laundromat stirs up CBD cocktails for guests to enjoy. Tickets can be purchased on the hosting establishment Volver's website. Aug. 14, 6-9 p.m., Volver, 300 S. Broad St., $95, philadelphia.volverrestaurant.com

August Ghost Tours

It may not be Halloween, but there are plenty of spooky happenings occurring around the City of Brotherly Love during the month of August. Join in on one of the most unique tours in Philly and uncover burial grounds, haunted mansions, unsolved mysteries and much more. This candlelit tour will be happening nightly throughout the month of August; tours depart every night from Signers' Garden at 5th and Chestnut streets. Any Philadelphian who wants to join in on all of the ghostly fun can save $5 on tickets by signing up online. Nightly through Aug. 31, 7:30-9 p.m., Signers' Garden, 5th and Chestnut, $11-$19, ghost-tour.com

Kensington Quarters and Bright Spot Farm Dinner

Head to Kensington Quarters this Thursday, when Executive Chef Matt Harper will team up with Wilmington, Delaware's Bright Spot Farms for an enticing five-course meal that highlights the best of late-summer produce. According to the release, this hyper-seasonal dinner showcases local produce at its finest including thick cherry tomatoes, ripe cherries and bright beets. There are only 20 spots available for this exclusive event, and a full bar will be available a la carte. Aug. 15, 7 p.m., Kensington Quarters, 1310 Frankford Ave., $75, kensingtonquarters.com

Guaranteed Fixed-Rate CD

Annual Percentage Yield for a 7-month term with new money deposits of at least $25,000.²

Enroll in a branch by August 30, 2019. Business owner? Ask about our business savings rates.

Offers available in CT, DE, FL, NJ, NY, and PA. Portfolio by Wells Fargo® customers are eligible to receive an additional bonus interest rate on these accounts.³

1. To qualify for the advertised APY, you must enroll your new or existing Platinum Savings account in this offer between 07/08/2019 and 08/30/2019 by speaking to a banker and requesting the special rate. Offer is subject to change at any time, without notice, and is available only to Platinum Savings customers in the following states: CT, DE, FL, NJ, NY, PA. In order to earn the Special Interest Rate of 1.98% (Special Rate), you must deposit $25,000 in new money to the enrolled savings account and maintain a minimum daily account balance of $25,000 throughout the promotional interest rate period. "New money" is money from sources outside of the customer's current relationship with Wells Fargo Bank, N.A. or its affiliates (which includes all deposit, brokerage and loan/credit accounts). The corresponding Annual Percentage Yield (APY) for this offer is 2.00%. The Special Rate will be applied to the enrolled savings account for a period of 12 months, starting on the date the account is enrolled in the offer. However, for any day during that 12 month period that the daily account balance is less than the $25,000, the enrolled account will not be eligible for the Special Rate and will instead earn the applicable Standard Interest Rate for a Platinum Savings account. As of 05/31/2019, the Standard Interest Rate and APY for a Platinum Savings account in CT, FL, NJ and NY with an account balance of $0.01 and above is 0.05% (0.05% APY); and for a Platinum Savings account in DE and PA with an account balance of $0.01 to $99,999.99 is 0.05% (0.05% APY) and with an account balance of $100,000 and above is 0.10% (0.10% APY). Each tier shown reflects the current minimum daily collected balance required to obtain the applicable APY. Interest is compounded daily and paid monthly. The amount of interest earned is based on the daily collected balances in the account. Upon the expiration of the 12 month promotional period, then-current Standard Interest Rates apply. Minimum to open a Platinum Savings account is $25. A monthly service fee of $12 applies in any month the account falls below a $3,500 minimum daily balance. Fees may reduce earnings. Interest rates are variable and subject to change without notice. Wells Fargo may limit the amount you deposit to a Platinum Savings account to an aggregate of $1 million. 2. Available in-branch only; you must speak with a banker to request the special rate. Annual Percentage Yield (APY) is effective for accounts opened between 07/08/2019 and 08/30/2019 and requires a minimum of $25,000 in new money brought to Wells Fargo. "New money" is money from sources outside of the customer's current relationship with Wells Fargo Bank, N.A. or its affiliates (which includes deposit, brokerage and loan/credit accounts). Public Funds and Wholesale accounts are not eligible for this offer. APY assumes interest remains on deposit until maturity. Interest is compounded daily. Payment of interest on CDs is based on term: For terms less than 12 months (365 days), interest may be paid monthly, quarterly, semi-annually, or at maturity (the end of the term). For terms of 12 months or more, interest may be paid monthly, quarterly, semi-annually, or annually. A penalty for early withdrawal will be imposed and could reduce earnings on this account. Special Rates are applicable to the initial term of the CD only. At maturity, the special rate CD will automatically renew for a term of 6 months, at the interest rate and APY in effect for CDs on renewal date not subject to a Special Rate, unless the Bank has notified you otherwise. 3. Due to the new money requirement, new accounts may only be opened at your local branch and you must speak to a banker to request the special rate offers for both new and existing accounts. Wells Fargo reserves the right to modify or discontinue the offer at any time without notice. Minimum new money deposit requirement of at least $25,000 is for this offer only and cannot be transferred to another account to qualify for any other consumer deposit offer. If you wish to take advantage of another consumer deposit offer requiring a minimum new money deposit, you will be required to do so with another new money deposit as stated in the offer requirements and qualifications. Offer cannot be: • Combined with any other consumer deposit offer. • Reproduced, purchased, sold, transferred, or traded. 3. The Portfolio by Wells Fargo program has a $30 monthly service fee, which can be avoided when you have one of the following qualifying balances: $25,000 or more in qualifying linked bank deposit accounts (checking, savings, CDs, FDIC-insured IRAs) or $50,000 or more in any combination of qualifying linked banking, brokerage (available through Wells Fargo Advisors, LLC) and credit balances (including 10% of mortgage balances, certain mortgages not eligible). If the Portfolio by Wells Fargo relationship is terminated, the bonus interest rate on all eligible savings accounts, and discounts or fee waivers on other products and services, will discontinue and revert to the Bank's then-current applicable standard interest rate or fee. For bonus interest rates on time accounts, this change will occur upon renewal. If the Portfolio by Wells Fargo relationship is terminated, the remaining unlinked Wells Fargo Portfolio Checking or Wells Fargo Prime Checking account will be converted to another checking product or closed.

The new Amazon documentary 'Free Meek' puts our judicial system on trial

We spoke with investigator Tyler Maroney about the injustices that have followed the Philly rapper for over a decade.

PAT KING
patrick.king@metro.us

Philly rapper Meek Mill never thought that a possession-of-firearms conviction when he was 18 years old would lead to a life of constant surveillance and borderline harassment from the American judicial system. But that has been his life for the past 14 years, as an overly harsh judge used dubious technicalities as parole violations that have sent him in and out of prison. In "Free Meek," the new five-part documentary series on Amazon Prime, Tyler Maroney and Luke Brindle-Khym of the investigative firm QRI, the same firm that produced the documentary "The Case Against Adnan Syed," took a deep dive into Meek's case up until his release from prison in 2018. We spoke with Maroney about working with Meek and the deep-rooted issues that need to be solved in our criminal justice system.

What initially drew your investigative firm to this project?

We got the assignment from Roc Nation because they had an artist, Meek Mill, who had been arrested and literally thrown in prison for a probation violation. Roc Nation and all of Meek's friends and family and advocates were completely shocked at the severity of that punishment for such a minor probation violation that they decided that they wanted to amass as many resources as they could to help them. One of those resources was us. We were brought to the table because our private investigations firm specializes in investigative work that supports the criminal-defense mentality. So we see ourselves in many ways as contrarians to the official record. We've worked with organizations that fight wrongful convictions like the Innocence Project. And we've worked with civil-rights firms and other nonprofits that are set up to right the wrongs of the criminal justice system. In many ways, our mindset jives well with this assignment. It was a challenging, fascinating and ultimately successful case.

Do you feel as though investigative true-crime documentaries in the streaming era are now useful tools to help energize the public to demand justice in instances of wrongful convictions? Do you see them as a new form of checks and balances on the justice system?

I love that question because in many ways, yes. On one end of the spectrum there is a lot of "true-crime smut," and on the other end there are films like "Free Meek" and other films — "The Jinx," for example. It's not necessarily shining a light on the criminal justice system, but they are revealing information that the media has not otherwise had the resources or the motive to reveal. With respect to documentaries that are as well-produced and tell the narrative in a way that is compelling that "Free Meek" does, it allows us to counter the official record that may not be accurate from the outside. People talk about wanting to make a change in society, they often think about writing to your congressperson or voting for new elected officials. Which is, of course, a valuable tool. But if that doesn't work in the current environment where we're at, where we have a president and we have elected officials who are rolling back criminal justice reform, it's investigations like ours, legal minds like Meek's lawyers and documentaries like "Free Meek" that are able to, we hope, open people's eyes and inspire the electorate to think long and hard about what they can do to right the kind of wrongs that Meek had to suffer through.

Why are we buying more and more on the internet?

Metro investigates the phenomenon.

LUZ LANCHEROS
letters@metro.us

Technology is killing retail. To the point that it had to reinvent itself. But beyond the economic issues, the internet has provided customers with a new feature: see it and get it now. Everything, and immediately! Well, despite the fact it might take up to two months for the product to be shipped from China.

According to statistics, e-commerce sales are growing globally. Statistics state that the segment reached $669 billion in January of this year.

"We develop a friendly and secure platform where we have several advantages for customers. A protected purchase program, free shipping with minimal risks. We feature recognized brands, as well as loyalty programs with competitive prices. But also, a clean process for the client to have an impeccable experience with us," Juan Camilo Pachon, marketplace manager of Mercado Libre, one of the largest online buying and selling communities in Latin America, explained to Metro.

ISTOCK

Yes, everything is easier for those who are busy, or those who want everything at the distance of a click. However, problems do emerge when people are struggling with other issues and forget about the balance while making purchases.

Many people, having more payment options and more possibilities to access credit, face serious problems of self-control.

"If a person lacks self-control, the ideal would be not to be exposed to social networks, to be accompanied to control these compulsions. When something is bought impulsively, there is a tendency towards low self-esteem. That is why this lack of self-love is mitigated with shopping," Milena Ruiz, psychologist, told to Metro.

But, according to experts, there is no need to demonize online shopping.

gratification, there are also purchases that help us solve problems. That is, not everything is negative. What you have to ask yourself is what is behind this purchase and about the frequency you are buying products. How it becomes pathological, which is what we see with compulsive accumulators ("Without this I do not succeed, I am worthless, I am not well"). But there is also something else: the pleasure of acquiring things. And in society this is considered a synonym of success. While there is a more conscious trend, this continues to dominate. There is also a problem of connecting the goods with personal fulfillment," Carine Gómez, director of virtual psychology at the Andean Area University Foundation, stated.

"The other big problem is that we privilege aesthetics over other elements of our humanity," Gomez concluded.

And this is a huge question: Is our welfare worth months of debt?

ESPN's Matthew Berry on 'Fantasy Life'

Berry's 'Fantasy Life' app is giving sports bettors a sizable advantage.

MATT BURKE

Matt Burke is a veteran sports journalist and the Founder and Editor in Chief of MetroBet.

Obtaining information that few others have gives you a huge leg up when it comes to wagering on sports. And with more and more states legalizing sports betting, it's no surprise that many companies are jockeying for top billing in the sports information game.

One start-up that is being financially backed by pro athletes and was co-founded by Matthew Berry, the premier mind in fantasy football at ESPN for years, is Fantasy Life, which promises users industry-leading breaking-news alerts that "beat competitors by up to 15 minutes." Users can also post, poll other players, and chat about sports on the Fantasy Life app.

"I've always loved the community aspect of fantasy. So I wanted to create a space for fantasy players and sports gamblers alike to interact, share advice, and help each other win," Berry told MetroBet in an exclusive interview. "And then I wanted tools that could give our users a clear-cut advantage, which is where our industry-leading alerts come in. In terms of a real thing, it's been growing for most of our first full football season with the real product, but when Carlos Hyde was traded from the Browns out of the blue, we beat everyone to the news by almost ten minutes. Our users all snatched up Nick Chubb (Hyde's backup) and he lead them to many fantasy titles. People were thrilled — that was a watershed moment for us. When you read our reviews on iTunes (we are at 4.8 stars) that gets mentioned a lot."

Investors include MLB All-Stars Josh Donaldson (Atlanta Braves), Evan Longoria (San Francisco Giants), David Price (Boston Red Sox) and Adam Wainwright (St. Louis Cardinals), NASCAR's Kyle Busch, NBA team owner Jesse Itzler (Atlanta Hawks), and DFS expert and Millionaire Maker winner Al Zeidenfeld.

"Athletes are the most competitive people ever, and when they compete in fantasy it's no different," Berry told MetroBet. "Honestly, a lot of our investors came from the app itself. Guys were using the app to help them with their fantasy teams and it helped them so much they reached out and asked how they could get involved. Because of the alerts and the community, the app gives a legit competitive advantage to those in fantasy leagues and for those that bet on sports."

College football O/U: Texas A&M

Texas A&M Aggies Over 7.5 wins (-134)

The Aggies appear to be seriously undervalued by oddsmakers heading into this season after an 8-4 campaign a year ago.

Dual-threat junior signal caller Kellen Mond should be sharper than he was in his sophomore season, which wasn't even that bad. He threw for over 3,000 yards and 24 TDs, but he completed only 57.3 percent of his passes while averaging a modest 7.5

yards per attempt. Mond also tossed nine INTs. However, Mond accumulated 474 yards rushing and seven TDs on the ground. The native Texan has top target Quartney Davis (45 catches, seven TDs) back in the fold along with a solid running back tandem in Jashaun Corbin and Cordarrian Richardson. Three of the five offensive line starters from 2018 have also returned.

Defense could be the Aggies' undoing in 2019

as they return just one starter from last year's front seven.

Jimbo Fisher's squad probably won't be able to hang with Clemson, Alabama and even Georgia, regardless of venue, but their season finale at LSU is winnable if all goes well. Even if they drop that game, Texas A&M would still post an 8-4 record to help Over bettors cash.

Harper, Hoskins headlining Phillies' offensive struggles

Two of the Phillies' largest bats have been no-shows during the second half.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

Things continue to get worse for the Philadelphia Phillies as the slumping franchise inches ever so closer to hitting the panic button.

A West Coast trip has only magnified the team's struggles as they continue sinking in the standings. After losing two of three to the Arizona Diamondbacks, the Phillies dropped two of the first three games of a four-game slate against the San Francisco Giants.

It's further accentuated a nightmarish two months that saw the Phillies go from the National League East leader to being on the outside, looking in, at the Wild Card race.

That's what a 23-29 stretch will do dating back to June 9.

More recently, the Phillies' 3-6 stretch over their last nine entering Sunday night had condemned them to fourth place in the NL East as they were looking up at the Atlanta Braves, Washington Nationals and New York Mets.

The Mets continue to be one of the hottest teams in baseball as they started the second half winning 21 of their first 26 games, which has only added to Philadelphia's frustration.

The most recent culprit has been the offense, which has been the epitome of inconsistency.

Besides a Friday night explosion which saw them plate nine runs against the Giants, the Phillies had scored a

Rhys Hoskins and Bryce Harper have struggled to spark the Phillies' slumping offense this summer. GETTY IMAGES combined two runs dating back to Wednesday night.

Since July 12, they've averaged just four runs per game, almost a full run fewer than their first-half output.

And it's their two most important bats that have continuously come up empty throughout this stretch.

Bryce Harper is batting .237 with six home runs and 16 RBI in the 26 games post-All-Star break.

With seven weeks left in the season, a .249 batting average with 22 home runs and 78 RBI leaves plenty to be desired for a former MVP making $330 million.

Harper's struggles are nothing compared to Rhys Hoskins', however. The slugging first baseman has looked lost at the plate throughout the second half of the season which is derailing a once-promising campaign.

In his first 89 games of the season, Hoskins was flirting with a 40 home-run pace to go with his .263 batting average.

After the All-Star break, however, Hoskins has nosedived, batting .194 with four home runs and 10 RBI in his last 27 games.

If the Phillies have any hope of turning things around, those two bats have to wake up and throttle the lineup back toward contention.

As it stands, though, the playoffs are going to be a tough ask given the way they are performing.

PA native Christian Pulisic makes Premier League debut

Hershey, Pa., native Christian Pulisic made his debut for English Premier League giants Chelsea on Sunday morning in a season-opening clash against legendary side Manchester United.

Pulisic entered the game in the 58th minute, becoming just the second American ever to suit up for Chelsea in the Premier League.

It was a debut to forget for the 20-year-old as Chelsea was thumped 4-0 by Manchester United at Old Trafford.

Chelsea trailed 1-0 at the half behind Marcus Rashford's first of two goals on the afternoon. Upon Pulisic's introduction to the game, United scored twice in 90 seconds from the 65th and 67th minute.

Daniel James, fresh off a signing from Swansea City, added United's fourth in his debut with the club, providing Frank

GETTY IMAGES

Lampard with a heavy defeat in his first match as Chelsea manager.

Pulisic was a non-factor during most of his debut as a resolute United defense isolated him on the left wing. The midfielder is seen as Chelsea's replacement of Eden Hazard, the Belgian international superstar who signed with Real Madrid during the offseason.

He became the highest-paid American player in Premier League history when Chelsea signed him to a $73 million contract back in January from German side Borussia Dortmund. Chelsea immediately loaned him back to Dortmund to complete the 2018-19 season.

The move turned out to be the last notable signing by Chelsea before they were banned for two transfer windows by FIFA after violating rules and regulations.

A quick turnaround awaits Chelsea as they take on Liverpool in the UEFA Super Cup on Wednesday, where Pulisic could get the start.

Pulisic's development at Chelsea will be eyed closely by the United States national team as they attempt to erase the painful memories of missing the 2018 FIFA World Cup. The midfielder is becoming a mainstay on the team with 31 caps since 2016.
